

Jordan Sangha is the eccentric 2023 winner of ITV's reboot of the iconic Big Brother.

He captured the heart of the nation with his quirky charm, dry humour, love of floral shirts and honest reflections on his life thus far.

Hailing from Scunthorpe, North Lincolnshire, Jordan is a trained Lawyer, working many a nightshift in all four major supermarket bakeries to pay his way through law school!

After practising Law for a few years and feeling disillusioned with life, he applied for Big Brother on a whim as he was fascinated by the social experiment and wanted to challenge himself. He got more from the experience than he ever expected and picked up a stellar social media following along the way, creating content for brands such as Cadbury, Hello Fresh & Morrisons.

Jordan retains an interest in the Criminal Justice System – having grown up working class, he can recognise the issues first-hand.

When Jordan's not chasing justice, he enjoys writing fiction. He finds comfort in writing screenplays and prose.
